

Ray Quartararo

Jones Lang LaSalle

Managing Director, Northeast Region/International Director

Ray Quartararo is the Managing Director of the Northeast Region and International Director for Jones Lang LaSalle's Project and Development Services Group. He manages a team of over 200 project management professionals, executing over 10 million s.f. of project management assignments and approximately $3 billion construction spend on an annual basis. Quartararo has been directly involved with projects such as the new Bank of America Building at One Bryant Park, multiple projects for Deloitte, Verizon, Citigroup, MetLife, the Interpublic Group of Companies, WPP and Madison Square Garden. Other projects include: Time Warner's headquarters, Ernst & Young's headquarters at 5 Times Square, Alvin Ailey Dance Theater, multiple projects for Lehman Brothers, renovations and an addition to The Chapin School, and advisory services to the Port Authority of NY & NJ.

Prior to joining Jones Lang LaSalle, Quartararo was the founder and president of Quartararo & Associates, Inc. He has experience in construction management, project management, engineering, and international portfolio management.

Quartararo is a graduate of New York University School of Business, where he received an MBA in Management and International Business, and Tufts University, where he received a BS in Mechanical Engineering and a BA in English. Quartararo takes an active role in a number of industry organizations including Corenet and the New York Building Congress and has been a guest lecturer on many industry specific panels. Quartararo is involved in numerous charities including the March of Dimes, Special Olympics and the United Way. He is also a board member of the New York Building Foundation and the Westchester Children's Museum.

###