

BOBBIE THOMAS

Born in Providence, Rhode Island, and raised bi-coastal between New England and Los Angeles, Bobbie received her Bachelor of Science in Psychology from the University of Idaho and her Master of Science in Counseling from California State University of Northridge is close to completion. During her three years of graduate studies, Bobbie volunteered as an advocate and counselor at the Valley Trauma Center, a rape crisis treatment facility.

For five years, Bobbie shined as the West Coast Editor and “Bobbiez Buzz” advice columnist for top-selling national teen magazines “J-14” and “Twist.” Her assorted experience included style spreads, makeovers, do-it-yourself craft ideas and personal conversations with friends like: Jessica Simpson about body image and the pressure to be picture perfect, heart to heart chats with Britney Spears about boys, and Pink's idea of girl power. Bobbie's “Buzz” spread quickly, launching her and her fresh perspective from print into television, radio, and the World Wide Web, earning her the reputation of being genuine and reliable.

As co-host of the Style Network's “Fashion Police,” Bobbie helped to not only transform viewers, but trends, by taking from the runway, what could work their way. For the past six years, Bobbie has appeared as both a co-host and guest on a variety of E! Entertainment specials, including their annual red-carpet Emmy, Golden Globe, Screen Actors Guild, and Academy Awards coverage.

From FOX and CNN to VH-1 and MTV, the ladies of ABC's “The View” and the boys of “The Best Damn Sports Show Period,” Bobbie's shared her tips, tricks and Hollywood secrets with a wide audience. She has taken viewers inside celebrity lifestyles as the style correspondent for “On-Air with Ryan Seacrest,” and has tried everything from sky diving to speed dating as a correspondent for both “E! News” and “Extra.”

Currently, millions of people wake up to catch Bobbie on NBC's “Today Show,” where she serves as Style Editor. Her weekly TodayShow.com Style Buzz articles have become a popular fixture for the Fashion & Beauty section, and are often pulled to also appear on MSN.com and MSN messenger, as well as MSNBC.com's home page.

From front row at fashion week to the red carpet, Bobbie possesses a rare ability to be relatable, regardless of where or who she is with. She's not only a go-to-gal for a new generation, but a trusted girlfriend. Bobbie Thomas is a new breed of talent with her own style, flair and modern-age philosophy.